

Happy 5th Monthsary Munch!

First of all, I would like to express my gratitude for all the efforts and sacrifices you have made in this relationship. I really appreciate it whenever you show your love for me especially at times when even I know it's hard to show. My only wish is for us to stay together on this trip.

We've been together for 5 months but it feels like it has been a really long time since we met each other. I can't help but feel closer as time goes by. We may have to deal with a lot of arguments and challenges within ourselves and this relationship, but we always manage to survive together.

With every argument, we discover an unpleasant part of ourselves that we were not aware of. We always choose to stay, forgive, and change for the better in order to keep this relationship going. You may have done and said a lot of hurtful things, but that's all expected if we want to slowly adjust and change for each other's ideals because that's what love is all about.

When all is said and done, I still want us standing next to each other. You might think the arguments or problems we share are signs to leave or give up. I'd say don't ever let your demons win. No matter how cold our nights may get, let's always try our best to find that warm breeze. Those challenges we went through, are no more than signs of how strong our bond is.

At the very start and end of everyday, "I love you" is what I hope you'd always say. I'm hoping for more arguments with you, so I can slowly break my shell and surrender to you. I may often look mad but if you dive deeper, you'll see a boy who's naught but feeling sad.

You may or may not love me as a whole, but my love for you has always been real and I hope that's what you feel. We both have bad sides but I hope you realize you have more to fix than I. I hope you won't get tired of changing. At the end of even the darkest tunnel is a light that leads to the destination which you so seek.

I love you, my princess. I hope we continue making each other feel as special as we hold each other dear. When all is fixed and clear, I will hold your hand and smile and say "Thank you for trusting me, my dear".